One Merald and Aleus

E. H. A'll L. Borns

If it should come to pass that we are to have a child labor law, as proposed by the advocates of that scheme, there will have to be an inspector to see that the law is properly enforced. That will cost some money and will be a nice, fat job for somebody. It is all right to have such an officer if we are to have such a law, for it ought to be enforced, but we cannot help but believe that but we cannot help but believe that some of the loud-mouthed politicians who have been crying themselves hoarse over the "inhumanity of conditions" had that job in view all the time. They will be easily spotted after the legislature gets in good working order. Columbia Record.

We do not claim to be better than other people, but there are times when, and there are cases in which we can imagine that people advocate and work for the common weal without purely selfish and personal motives. At least without the hope of pecuniary benefit. We believe there are people who are sometimes termed politicians who are in favor of a Bill to protect the children of the State, and who take that position from patriotic motives and with a view solely to the betterment of the people and the elevation of the future citizenship of the State. We would hate to see in every position and act of our public men purely and only sordid motives. Why should it be necessary to have an officer to see to the enforcement of a child labor law? The mill men in this State, so far as our knowledge goes, are law-abiding citizens, and we believe would regard the statutes of the State. There are many laws on the statute books of this State forbidding certain things and fixing a penalty, and yet there are no special officers to see to their enforcement. If a law were passed by the legislature forbidding child labor in our mills, it would be as well enforced without a special officer with a fat job as it would be with such profiles. If a law were of land lying and being in the county and State aforesaid and containing Sixty-five Acres, more or less, bounded south by lands of Pierce Wicker, north by lands of A. M. Dominick and west by public road from Newberry to Prosperity. an officer, if not better.

The law on child labor in Connecticut is contained in one sentence, and in a letter from a State official it is stated the "law is strictly enforced, and I feel confident meets with the almost universal approval of our citizens." Section 4704 of the general statutes of Connecticut, revision of 1902 reads: "No child under fourteen years of age shall be employed in any mechanical, mercantile or manufacturing establishment." That is plain and simple and scarcely admits of misconstruction and there is no provision for a fat job for any loudmouthed politician, and yet we are told it is strictly enforced and meets the almost universal approval of all the people. Are we to act on the presumption that our people are more lawless than the people of Connecticut, so much so that a fat job would have to be provided for some loud-mouthed politician in order to have the law enforced? We citizenship would meet the endorsement of our people, and would be observed and enforced without providing a soft berth for some loud-mouthed politician.

We would be glad if every citizen of the county would drive over the street from Jamieson's corner to the Baptist church up Caldwell street and compare its present condition with the condition a few weeks ago when it was almost impassable and about on a par with the average country road. In many parts of the county the material is right at hand to turn the roads into the condition of this street with a very small cost, if the machinery were bought by the county.

We have the rock and the sand and the clay right by the roadside to make good roads. Of course we cannot get the country roads throughout the county in the condition of this street, but with the proper outfit and a little money and the business management which should be exercised in the county affairs, we can have great improvement in our highways. If we had good roads the money invested in them would pay the biggest dividends to our farmers of any money they could be called on to put out for the public good. They are great time savers, horse and vehicle preservers and money makers-good roads.

"On page 108 of Col. Dickert's History of Kershaw's Brigade, the name of J. Crakeford, Captain Co. E., think it should be Drakeford. Same page Captain Co. G appears the name of "J. Friesdale," should be J. E. Truesdel. There was no such person in the company as "Friesdale." On page 545, Adjutant E. E. Sill, instead E. C. Sill. Adjutant E. E. Sill, instead E. C. Sill. On page 549, Co. G. Lieutenants, should read T. R. Cantey instead Cantley Sergeants, J. E. Truesdel instead "Tuesdale." S. J. Benton instead F. J. Privates, all names spelt "Tuesdel' should be Truesdel. Between pages 408 and 409 appears engraving of J. F. Tuesdale, the name should be spelt Truesdel, and the title of captain

The above corrections are made at the suggestion of one who knows. It is almost impossible to get names all is almost impossible to get names all correct when the rolls in Columbia are so incomplete, and we would be glad to have any corrections which may be noticed by any one in possession of the facts. If the records are not cortaining Two and 16-100 Acres many containing the containing th rected now it will soon be too late.
